

A WEBSITE THAT MOVES LIKE THE PERSON BEHIND THE MIC

Rob's product is not footage. It is what happens in a room once he is in it. A portfolio page would have shown the footage and lost the reason anyone books him. So we built ROB DOES IT to behave the way the night behaves: fast, loud, in motion, and never more than one tap from booking.

THE BUSINESS

YOU CANNOT PUT ENERGY IN A BIO

Rob is a host, interviewer and, in his own words on the site, a professional crowd mover. He works events in Los Angeles and Hollywood: music, fashion, red carpets, nightlife, brand activations, creator events. He arrives with a microphone and a camera, and the night leaves with a library of content.

An organiser is not buying a videographer. They are buying what happens to a room when a particular person walks in with a mic. A conventional portfolio, a headshot, a biography, a grid of clips and a contact form, would have undersold that immediately, because each element describes the service and none performs it. So the website had to be a sample of the product.

FIVE PROBLEMS, ONE PAGE TO SOLVE THEM

Everything difficult about the brief comes from one place: the thing being sold only exists in motion, and the buyer is deciding in seconds.

PERSONALITY DOES NOT SURVIVE A STATIC PAGE A host's value is timing, reaction and nerve. A biography can state those words, not demonstrate them.	BUYERS NEED PROOF Organisers have been burned by coverage that looked nothing like the night. They want the actual rooms and the actual face.	A SOCIAL AUDIENCE EXPECTS MOVEMENT Rob's audience arrives from vertical video. A still, text-heavy site reads as a step backwards within one scroll.	SEVERAL ROLES, ONE PERSON Host, interviewer, creator and podcaster are four purchases. As a list they look unfocused, so they became one chain.	ENTERTAIN AND CONVERT AT ONCE Pure showreel buries the booking path. Pure sales page kills the energy. Both lose the booking.
---	---	--	---	---

The organising principle: show the energy before explaining it, show the work before pricing it, and never put the booking more than one tap away from whatever the visitor is enjoying.

WHAT AN ORGANISER IS REALLY BUYING

- 1 Movement. The room changes once he is in it.
- 2 Pace and volume. Fast, loud, never boring.
- 3 Personality. The actual face in front of the guests.
- 4 Content. A library the night leaves behind.

THE SEARCHES BEHIND THE VISIT

BUYERS SEARCH FOR COVERAGE, AND FIND A HOST WHO MOVES THE ROOM

Organisers often start with the vocabulary of video: production, videographers, videography. The site meets that search and then changes the question. The terms below are the language buyers use, shown as search language, not as a list of services offered.

EVENT COVERAGE Rob works live events across music, fashion, red carpets, nightlife and creator events. The night leaves with six named kinds of output: interviews, crowd, venue, red carpet, social cuts and highlight film. Event video production Live event videography Event videography services	FINDING AN EVENT VIDEOGRAPHER The site's own argument sits here: a videographer watches the moment, Rob gets inside the moment. It reframes the comparison from day rates to two different outcomes. Event videographer Event videographer near me Professional videographer near me Videography services	SOCIAL-FIRST CONTENT Rob's audience watches vertical video, so the content is built for it. A single live experience becomes a library of social-first cuts. Social media video production Social media videographer Event content creator Video content marketing
--	--	---

LONG FORM AND PROMOTION Podcast episodes sit beside the clips, and every clip is tagged with the platform it was published on. The highlight film gives an organiser something to promote with. YouTube video production Promotional video services	COMPARING PRICE Three access levels are priced openly on the page, with counted deliverables, so the hardest question is answered before anyone asks it. Video production cost	BROAD VIDEO SEARCHES The widest searches bring buyers comparing production companies. The site answers with a different proposition: a host who moves the room, and content as what the night leaves behind. Video production Video production company Video production services Video production near me Video production company near me Corporate videographer
--	--	--

These terms describe how people search, not what the client offers. ROB DOES IT is not presented as a video production company or a corporate videographer. The site sells a host-led experience, and the content is what it leaves behind.

WHAT WE BUILT

01 / 07

ONE NIGHT. DOZENS OF MOMENTS. WEEKS OF CONTENT.

The commercial engine of the brand is that a single evening does not stay a single evening. The site describes the service as four short events in sequence, and borrows that structure everywhere: the Host, Interview and Create cards, the Book, Showtime, Create and Amplify steps, the method on the about page. The brand already thinks in sequences, because a night is a sequence.

02 / 07

SHOW THE ENERGY BEFORE EXPLAINING IT

The strategy fits on one line, and every creative decision is downstream of it: show it. Headlines are short and run at event speed. Type is set at poster scale in capitals, so a phone screen carries the volume of a venue banner. Crowd, stage, carpet and street footage appears above the fold and keeps appearing, and the copy is written the way he talks, so the brand voice reads as a transcript, not a tone guideline.

TWO DOORS, OPEN AT ONCE	Watch Rob for the sceptic, Book Rob for the convinced. Neither has to scroll.
A COINED TITLE	Professional crowd mover does the positioning in three words and sounds like a job that should not exist.

03 / 07

A CAMERA CAN RECORD A ROOM. ROB CHANGES THE ROOM.

The Rob Effect is the site's own section and its most important positioning. Every event in Los Angeles can hire someone with a camera, and plenty are excellent. What a camera operator cannot do is change the temperature of the room they are shooting. The claim is defensible because it describes a different job, and it quietly reframes the price comparison from day rates for the same deliverable to two different outcomes.

PLACED AFTER THE PROOF	A visitor who has just watched a crowd react reads the claim as a description of what they saw.
DELIBERATELY STILL	The largest image on the page, with no navigation pressure and no competing call to action.

04 / 07

A FEED, NOT A GALLERY

The top-viewed reel is handled by hand, under the instruction drag, swipe, tap to watch, the gesture his audience uses all day. Clips are titled in Rob's voice and tagged with the platform they were published on, which makes each one a published artefact that can be checked. The watch page turns one library into nine audience-specific showreels: a fashion organiser presses Fashion, a label presses Music. It loads twelve clips first, which keeps a heavy page quick on a phone.

05 / 07

THE PRICE, IN PUBLIC

Creative work is hard to buy because it is hard to bound. The packaging solves that with named levels, published prices, counted deliverables and an escape hatch for everything that does not fit. Publishing the price removes the largest friction in buying creative services and does the qualifying: anyone for whom the number is wrong leaves without occupying a conversation. Three separate buttons carry the choice with the click, so the enquiry arrives pre-qualified.

NAMES, NOT TIERS	Each with a tagline stating the outcome. Bronze, silver and gold would have flattened the brand at the moment of purchase.
A DOOR FOR THE REST	Recurring events, brand partnerships, festival coverage, hosting only or interview only have somewhere to land.

06 / 07

FOUR PAGES, ONE DESTINATION

Four URLs carry the entire brand: home, watch, work with Rob and about. There is no blog, no portfolio archive and no services matrix three levels down. Attention is collected on three pages and converted on one, in the order that works: qualify, explain, price, then ask. The booking flow is framed as a conversation, five quick steps and no forms that feel like paperwork, which is the right pattern on a phone at one in the morning after an event.

TEN EVENT TYPES NAMED	The visitor finds their own event before they are asked for anything.
THE ABOUT PAGE	Origin story and method, with no credential: it started with a phone and a sidewalk.

07 / 07

MOTION WHERE IT WORKS, STILL WHERE IT DOES NOT

A brand this loud invites a site that never stops moving. The build does not take that bait. Motion is concentrated in the two places where it does commercial work, discovering clips and sensing range, and withdrawn wherever the visitor is asked to read, compare or decide. Playback is a choice, never forced: autoplaying audio at an unknown moment is the fastest way to lose an organiser browsing at their desk. That is the difference between a site with energy and one that is merely busy.

RESULTS & IMPACT

A CAPABILITY, STATED AT THE LEVEL IT CAN BE DEFENDED

No performance data was supplied and none is claimed. What follows is the capability the architecture creates.

31 clips	Proof instead of adjectives Thirty-one published pieces and real venues, so the site argues with artefacts a buyer can open.	Distinct	A category of one Professional crowd mover separates Rob from every videographer and every host at the same time.
3 prices	Creative work made purchasable Named levels, published prices and counted deliverables an approver who was not in the room can sign off.	4 pages	One destination, many doors Every page ends at Book Rob, with a custom route for anything the three levels do not fit.
5 steps	Enquiries arrive informed A buyer who clicks Build Momentum has already chosen a level, so the conversation starts at logistics.	One story	Social and site together Clips carry their platform on the card, so the library is the same work the audience already follows.

No views, followers, engagement, bookings, enquiries, revenue, event attendance, traffic or rankings are claimed. None were supplied. Prices are reproduced as the client publishes them, not interpreted or compared to any market rate. Nothing here describes what any client received.

WHAT'S NEXT

THREE THINGS THAT SHARPEN THE LOOP

The architecture is built. The next layer measures where buyers drop out and gives the strongest proof more room.

MEASURE EACH STEP OF THE BOOKING FLOW

Starts against completions by step, which package would was clicked, and the share of enquiries arriving through the custom route.

GIVE THE PODCAST A PAGE OF ITS OWN

It supports the top level's headline inclusion, and a dedicated page would let it carry that weight.

STATE THE PRACTICAL TERMS

Turnaround, revision rounds, usage rights and travel, answered on the page so an organiser never needs a back-and-forth to understand the offer.

SOME BRANDS CANNOT BE EXPLAINED WITH A TEMPLATE

Bytes & Partners builds digital experiences around whatever makes a brand impossible to ignore, then routes that straight into the thing it needs people to do. If your value is a person, a performance or a room, a page that lists your services is working against you. The site has to behave the way you do, and then ask for the booking, clearly, on every screen.
