

A DIGITAL HOME FOR ATHLETES BEYOND THE CONTRACT

An agency's product is a decade of someone's life. The page has to be read by a nineteen-year-old and by their mother, usually at the same time, and it has to answer a question neither will ask out loud: can we trust these people with the whole career, not just the deal? Weisz Sports Management represents baseball players and the families behind them.

SPORTS MANAGEMENT ATHLETE REPRESENTATION BASEBALL AGENT DIGITAL STRATEGY UX/UI HIGH-TRUST DESIGN

9 Services published, each with a one-line description PUBLISHED	3 People named on the team page, with full biographies PUBLISHED	2 FAQ answers, on NCAA eligibility and agent certification PUBLISHED	5 Destinations in the navigation, no maze PUBLISHED
---	---	---	--

CLIENT Weisz Sports Management	SECTOR Professional sports - Athlete representation	SERVICES Digital strategy - UX/UI - Web	FOCUS Baseball players and families	REVIEWED October 2026
-----------------------------------	--	--	--	--------------------------

TRUST IS THE PRODUCT. THE WEBSITE EARNS IT OR LOSES IT.

Weisz Sports Management represents baseball players, amateur, drafted and professional, and the families standing behind them. The site states the scope in three words at the top of the home page: Representation. Relationships. Results.

Reduce that to contract negotiation and the business disappears. The published service list runs to nine lines and only two are about signing a deal. The rest cover draft preparation, recruitment, NIL, sponsorship, endorsements, equipment, career management and financial and family guidance. That last line is doing quiet work, and the home page explains why: representation goes far beyond baseball.

TWO READERS, TWO QUESTIONS

A The athlete. Has this agency done this before, and can they get me what I am worth?

P The parent. Who are these people, and will they still be here when it goes wrong?

+ A site that serves only one reads either mercenary or soft.

PRESSURES THAT ALL LAND ON THE SAME PAGE

Representation is bought on trust, by two people at once, usually long before anyone picks up a phone. Five pressures shaped the build.

RECRUITING IS COMPETITIVE AND PERSONAL Agencies compete for the same small group of players, often through the same coaches. By the time a family is on the site, they are comparing two or three names.	THE RELATIONSHIP IS LONG A family is choosing who will be in the room for the next ten years, a character judgement websites are badly built for.	CAREERS ARE UNCERTAIN Injury, release, the draft going the wrong way. The agency's real value shows in the bad years nobody wants on a homepage.	THE FAMILY IS PART OF THE DECISION Often the decisive part, a parent who knows nothing about agency economics and everything about whether people are straight with them.	CREDIBILITY MUST BE SHOWN Everybody says experienced, connected and honest. Only specifics survive comparison: named people, named histories, named institutions.
--	---	--	---	---

The organising principle: answer the scope question once and completely, put real people with checkable histories in front of the reader early, and make the first contact feel like an introduction rather than an application.

FINDING AN AGENT

The site represents baseball players across the amateur, drafted and professional stages. Its FAQ explains what certification as a player agent involves, which is advice a family can check.

- Sports agent
- Baseball agent
- Baseball agents
- Professional sports agent
- Athlete agent

AGENCY AND MANAGEMENT

Representation, Relationships, Results. The agency keeps its roster small on purpose and treats career management as part of the job.

- Sports management
- Sports agency
- Sports management agency
- Sports representation agency
- Athlete management

REPRESENTATION AND CONTRACTS

A contract negotiation page names four contract types alongside amateur draft advisory services.

- Athlete representation
- Player representation
- Sports contract negotiation

NIL

NIL representation is a named service, with a director of NIL and marketing who owns it. It is the newest service and the one families are least equipped for.

- NIL representation
- NIL deals
- NIL marketing

ENDORSEMENTS AND SPONSORSHIP

Sponsorship, endorsements and equipment contracts are each published services, and a marketing page covers public relations and appearances.

- Athlete endorsements
- Athlete sponsorship
- Athlete marketing

MARKETING AGENCY SEARCHES

Marketing is one part of a representation agency's work here, not a stand-alone offer.

- Sports marketing agency

These terms describe how people search, not what the client offers. The agency represents baseball players. NIL and marketing are services within representation, and no deal, value or outcome is claimed for any player.

WHAT WE BUILT

01 / 07

SIX STAGES, TWO READERS, ONE DECISION

Almost none of this journey happens in conversation. By the time a family calls, most of the judgement has been made from a phone, usually in the evening, usually together. Because arrival is rarely cold, the site's job at the start is confirmation, not persuasion: it has to look like the agency the referrer described.

02 / 07

ANSWER THE SCOPE QUESTION ONCE AND COMPLETELY

The most common failure in this category is a family not knowing what an agent actually does for them before the draft. Nine named services with one-line descriptions answer that on one screen. Read a second time as career needs, they stop being a menu and become a map of a player's life, from the amateur stage through the professional stage to the part that is not baseball at all.

ONLY TWO ABOUT THE DEAL	Draft preparation leads the list, and contract negotiation is one of nine, not the whole business.
THE LINE THAT EXPLAINS THE REST	Financial and family guidance is the only service not about baseball, published as a named commitment.

03 / 07

REPRESENTATION GOES FAR BEYOND BASEBALL

The home page states the values in plain first-person prose: the agency stands by players and their families through every stage of their careers, especially the moments that have nothing to do with the field. It is specific about the unglamorous part, and specificity is the only thing that reads as true here. A featured player video sits directly above it, so the reader connects the two without being told to. The most important paragraph on the site is the one that looks least designed, which is correct.
TWO SPEEDS ON ONE SCROLL	The athlete scans the nine services. The parent reads the values.
VIDEO USED ONCE	A hero video sets the register in the first second, then gets out of the way.

04 / 07

PEOPLE, WITH HISTORIES YOU CAN CHECK

The team page does the most conversion work on the site. Three people appear with titles and full biographies: a founder, a director of operations and recruiting, and a director of NIL and marketing. A playing career, a coaching career, an operations role, a degree. Each is a small story about how that person came to understand what they are paid to advise on, and every piece can be verified by someone who wants to. Credentials are reproduced as the client publishes them.

THE THROUGH-LINE
- Scope. Nine services answer what.
- People. Three named leaders answer who.
- Position. A small roster answers will I matter.
- Family first. Stated early, repeated at the point of contact.

05 / 07

A ROSTER KEPT SMALL ON PURPOSE

The sharpest positioning on the site answers the young player's unspoken fear: a big agency's client list is its proof and its threat at once. Declaring the roster small on purpose, so every player gets real attention and not just a name on a client list, turns the agency's size into the reason to sign. It is falsifiable, which is what makes it persuasive. The same thread runs to the services page, which says above all, family first, and to the contact page.

THREE PEOPLE, AS PUBLISHED
FOUNDER / CEO Certified MLB player agent, 15+ years in the agency business	Agent
OPERATIONS & RECRUITING Division I playing career and college operations roles	College
NIL & MARKETING Sport management degree, agency and collegiate experience	NIL

06 / 07

ADVICE THAT DOES NOT BENEFIT THE AGENCY

The FAQ has two questions, both the right ones. The first tells a family how to stay eligible rather than how to sign: whether talking to an agent affects NCAA eligibility, the advisor distinction, and the warning that accepting anything of value or signing representation documents costs amateur status. The second explains what player-agent certification actually involves. A family that believes a conversation might cost eligibility will never start one, so the FAQ removes the fear that blocks the next step.

EXPLAINING THE STANDARD	Setting out how certification works is a stronger signal than claiming to meet it.
ROOM TO GROW	Two questions is a fraction of what a family asks, and the pattern can take many more.

07 / 07

AN INTRODUCTION, NOT AN APPLICATION

Every path ends at one ask, and the closing block states the visitor's own situation back to them: looking for representation? The contact page is headed Become Part Of The Weisz Sports Family, framing the first message as an introduction and closing the loop opened by family first three pages earlier. The form accepts a file, because the first thing a player wants to send is video or a resume.

RESULTS & IMPACT

AN ARCHITECTURE, STATED AT THE LEVEL IT CAN BE DEFENDED

No performance data was supplied and none is claimed. What follows is capability created by the structure, which is different from a result.

9 services	The scope question, answered once Nine services with descriptions settle what most agency sites never make clear at all.	Checkable	Specifics instead of adjectives Certification, institutions and prior roles, each verifiable by a family that wants to check.
3 people	Named and accountable Three leaders with titles and full histories, against the category default of a logo and a form.	2 readers	Athlete and parent both served Scannable scope for one, written character for the other, on the same scroll.
Small	The roster as the offer The one claim a larger competitor structurally cannot match.	1 ask	An introduction, not an application A file upload so the first message can carry evidence.

No athletes, representation agreements, contract values, earnings, draft results, sponsorships, roster size, client count, enquiries, signings, traffic, rankings or revenue are claimed. None were supplied. Experience and certification are the client's own statements, reproduced as published and not verified here. Nothing on this page states that any player is represented by the agency.

WHAT'S NEXT

THREE WAYS TO DEEPEN THE TRUST

The positioning is sound. The next layer gives each service room to breathe and shows which part of the journey does the work.

A PAGE FOR EACH SERVICE NIL, sponsorship and career management deserve their own pages for the family that wants detail after the overview, the most serious prospect the site has.
GROW THE FAQ When to first talk to an agent, what changes when a player signs, what happens if he is not drafted, and who to call when something goes wrong.
MEASURE THE JOURNEY Form starts against completions, whether the file upload helps, which page preceded each enquiry, referral against search arrivals, and share of visits on a phone.

QUESTIONS

ABOUT THIS SPORTS MANAGEMENT CASE STUDY

IS WEISZ SPORTS MANAGEMENT AN AGENCY FOR BASEBALL PLAYERS?	+
DOES THE SITE COVER NIL DEALS, ENDORSEMENTS AND SPONSORSHIP?	+
IS IT A SPORTS MARKETING AGENCY?	+

SOME DECISIONS ARE MADE LONG BEFORE ANYONE CALLS YOU

Bytes & Partners builds digital experiences for brands where trust and performance both have to be evident, and where the person deciding is reading quietly, comparing you to two others, and will never tell you what tipped it. If your business is a relationship rather than a transaction, your website is the first interview, and you are not in the room for it.

START A CONVERSATION

DOWNLOAD THE FULL CASE STUDY